Investing in Indigenous Natural Resource Management assesses the case for investing in Indigenous natural resource management (NRM) in tropical Australia. Indigenous people provide a number of public goods in relation to environmental management for which they are not remunerated. Their presence on country should be viewed as a national asset. The health of Australia's Indigenous people remains unacceptably. Individual and collective engagement with ancestrally significant land and sea improves health outcomes, while also supporting individual autonomy and social cohesion through cultural practices. This book brings together a broad suite of authors with an understanding of Indigenous NRM and the economics thereof. Indigenous NRM emerges as a "keystone policy area" that could allow integration of many policy fields commonly considered in isolation. The editors - Marty Luckert from the University of Alberta and, from Charles Darwin University, Bruce Campbell, Julian Gorman and Stephen Garnett - all have wide experience in the fields covered by this book.
