

Charles Darwin University Press presents...

This fifth edition has been revised to bring the Territory story into the 21st Century.

Don Garden on the fourth (2000) edition: This is... now effectively a classic history. Far Country is a fascinating and admirable history of the Northern Territory... It ranges broadly over the expected themes of a regional history—Aboriginal society. European exploration and the early European colonial settlements, race relations, the struggle to establish viable industries, urban settlements, politics, local cultural elements, literature and some of the significant individuals. But the context of the Territory adds piquancy to the story because of its environmental and human uniqueness....To an observer from the south, it is...a far country.
